

In Memoriam: The Amy Winehouse Cat Eye & Beehive

Lucky by Lucky Magazine, on Tue Jul 26, 2011 12:55pm PDT

Post a Comment | Read More from This Author » | Report Abuse

Share

tweet 0

Email

Print

WireImage

Megan O'Niell, Lucky magazine

I loved her. I loved those crazy-exaggerated cat eyes (so exaggerated it looked as if she'd substituted the kind of brush used to baste a turkey for a pencil). The outrageous chunky slashes of liner were always impeccably shaded in and perfectly symmetrical. Here, my approximation.

- 1.) Use a thicker-tipped liner that's matte and super pigmented, like Urban Decay 24-7 Glide-On Eye Pencil or theBalm Pick Up Liner.
- 2.) Swipe your lid with a flesh-colored shadow.
- 3.) Trace the top rim of your lid with your liner then angle the line upward (very upward).

Related: Lucky's Guide to Dressing for Work

- 4.) Once you've got your shape, go over it with pencil until the lines are ultra-thick.
- 5.) Fine-tune the whole thing by adding mascara and brushing on more flesh-colored shadow.

The towering beehive that looked like it weighed more than double her body mass was spooky-cool and it was sexy and it was—so her. Here's how to get the look.

- 1.) Section off a substantial piece of hair from the top-middle of the back of your head (as if you were gathering hair to make a half-up-half-down ponytail), and sprinkle/rub in a volumizing powder or texturizer like Eufora Volume Fusion Spray.

See Also: The Cutest Summer Sundresses

- 2.) With a comb, tease the underside of the section of hair (the more you tease the hair into a matted clump, the more volume and height your hive will have).
- 3.) Tuck some of the teased hair under itself and pin it down using bobbi pins—almost as if you were curling it under in a roll—and leave some of the teased hair sticking up.
- 4.) Smooth strands of (un-teased) hair over the matted nest of hair and pin it down so that the teased hair is not visible.
- 5.) Finally, liberally apply serious holding spray like TRESemmé Tres Two Extra Hold Non-Aerosol Hair Spray or Living Proof Full Root Lifting Spray.